

DEATH OF TAYLOR IS GREAT LOSS

Very Popular Among Fellow Students in Med. '24

Medicine '24 was bereaved for the second time in the past year by the death of another returned soldier in the person of Eric Owen Taylor, who passed away in the Royal Victoria Hospital early on Tuesday morning. In the passing of Eric Taylor the class loses one of its most brilliant and beloved members—a man whose sole aim in life—devotion to duty—was blazoned forth in every day of his existence. Underestimating the danger of a carbuncle, he gamely continued his work until ordered to hospital on October 25th. Two operations were performed and although everything possible was done for him, complications arose which led to this fatal termination.

Eric Owen Taylor was born at Ladner, B.C., in 1896. Early in life he manifested an interest in medicine, becoming a graduate in pharmacy and a member of the British Columbia Pharmaceutical Association at 19 years of age.

Enlisting in 1915, he served four years with the C.A.M.C. In France he was corporal in the 2nd Field Ambulance. He was decorated for distinguished and continued service to wounded under fire, and in addition to the infrequent M.S.M. he had the Mons Star and the Victory Medal. Discharged at Vancouver in September, 1919, he was able to proceed to his home until he left for Montreal to begin the study of Medicine in October, 1919. This unfortunately was his last home visit, because for the past three summers he was engaged in the Great Lakes Service of Canadian Pacific Steamships, and so was unable to return to the West.

Since his admission to McGill the late Eric Taylor was noted for his regular attendance at lectures and clinics, and never missed either, except on account of illness. His record shows a creditable pass in all subjects of his course, and in addition to other honours, he last year led the class in Clinical Medicine. His aptitude for the clinical branches was amazing to those in close association with him. One clinical teacher has remarked that in an extensive experience in dealing with hundreds of students, "Taylor stood head and shoulders above them all, not only as a student, but as a man." Others have paid characteristic tributes, both previous and subsequent to his death.

Although naturally shy and retiring in his disposition in public, he was always firm in his convictions. He could never be brought to an unfair attitude in affairs of either local or general interest. As a friend and student his help was ever forthcoming. To him many men owe their understanding of some intricate or complex part of the work.

Always nervous and high strung, he was subjected by his last illness to pain which can only be vaguely understood. Throughout it all he was uncomplaining and even cheerful, gratefully recognizing as many friends as were permitted to see him. Even as death approached he maintained that character perhaps best described by an undefined soul.

He is survived by his father, Dr. A. De. R. Taylor and Mrs. Taylor, step-mother, Ladner, B.C.; two sisters, one of whom resides in Paris, France; and a brother, James Taylor, in British Columbia. Mrs. H. E. MacDonald, Westmount, is a distant relative, and Nursing Sister Scott, of Halifax, N.S., is a cousin.

Funeral arrangements are not complete, pending advice from his father, but it is expected that a funeral service will be held in St. John's Church at a time to be subsequently announced.

PLAYERS' CLUB TO MEET ONCE AGAIN

Officers Will Be Elected at Five Today

The Players' Club of McGill will begin its year's activities with a business meeting in Strathcona Hall at five o'clock this evening. The purposes of the meeting will be the election of officers and the discussion of a policy to be pursued.

The actual President, "Bob" Hall, will preside until a new executive has been chosen.

The Players' Club came into existence in the spring of 1921, and has become well known around college since then. It has produced several plays in the Convocation Hall of R. V.C., and has had a few meetings at which were present actors of some prominence who happened to be in the city at the time of the meetings.

From its very inception it has worked in close harmony with the English (Continued on Page Three)

PARTIES OF PARLIAMENT TO GATHER

Principal to Deliver Speech from the Throne

DUE CEREMONY

John Hackett, Esq., K.C., to Act as Speaker

With customary pomp and splendour, the Governor-General, Sir Arthur Currie, G.C.M.G., K.C.C.G., LL.D., will open Mock Parliament on the night of Thursday, the ninth of November. The Governor-General will be escorted by a guard of honour furnished by the McGill Contingent of the Canadian Officers' Training Corps.

His Excellency will reach the Parliament Buildings at a quarter-past eight in the evening, and will at once proceed to the robing rooms, off the ball room of the Union. From here he will enter the House itself, and will read the Speech from the Throne.

Upon the conclusion of His Excellency's address the House will proceed to the election of a Speaker. It is rumored in official circles that the choice of the House will probably fall upon John Hackett, Esq., K.C., who was Speaker at the last session. The Opposition has given no sign of objecting to such an appointment, and no other names have been advanced.

The party in power, under the Prime Minister, Rt. Hon. R. K. Jones, will occupy the government benches at the right of the throne. The official opposition will sit at the left. The various independent parties will have seats if they can find them, otherwise they will dispose themselves as best they may. The Progressive party will set its programme out at length in the Speech from the Throne. The Constitutional party stands pledged to balk at much of it.

Henry Cousens, seconded by R. Fortune, will move the adoption of the speech. There will probably be debate on the motion for some time.

The remainder of the first sitting will probably be taken up with the tabling of reports by the various ministers, and with discussion on these reports. There is material enough in these reports to afford scope for considerable argument.

It would be out of place here to discuss the policies of the two official parties. Whispers have it that there will be several independent members in the House. The strength of the Government is not at all assured, and the whips of the parties will all have their work well laid out for them when time for voting arrives.

V. Barre, leader of the Constitutional party, has hopes of being able successfully to oppose the programme which has been announced by the Cabinet. Equally sanguine are the Prime Minister and his followers. There will be stirring times in the House. All members must be in their places when the Chamber is called to order, to insure that the ceremonial will not be interrupted by untoward incidents.

MEDICAL STUDENTS HEAVILY FINED

Charges of Ungentlemanly Conduct Heard by S.C.

Two fifth year Medical students were yesterday disciplined by the Students' Council for conduct unbecoming to gentlemen while pursuing that part of their college course that made necessary their attendance at one of the city hospitals. Both of the men were fined fifteen dollars and received a severe reprimand from the Council, and were then sent to the Principal, Sir Arthur Currie, on the recommendation of the students' governing body.

A complaint had been lodged by the hospital authorities against a group of men who were living in the hospital for one week, as is the usual custom, on the grounds that they had caused unnecessary disturbance during their stay, and had rendered conditions in their room such that it was untenable for other men, as well as conducting themselves in an ungentlemanly way.

The men were brought before the Council at its meeting yesterday afternoon, and the investigation showed definitely that three of them were absolutely innocent of any of the misdoings complained about. The two main offenders also exonerated the other three men in the group from any part of the affair. As the statements plainly proved that the complaints from the hospital authorities, which were corroborated by a number of other students, were founded on facts, the members of the Council de- (Continued on Page Two)

BASEBALL SCHEDULE IS NOW ANNOUNCED

Need of Umpires for These Games is Urgent

The following is the schedule for the second round of the Interclass Indoor Baseball League:—

Tuesday, Nov. 7—Dent. '25 vs. Arts '24.
Wednesday, Nov. 8—Comm. '23 vs. Law '25.
Thursday, Nov. 9—Sci. '23 vs. Comm. '25.
Friday, Nov. 10—Sci. '26 vs. Arts '25.

Monday, Nov. 20—Dent. '26 vs. Med. '25.
Tuesday, Nov. 21—Med. '26 vs. Law '24.
Wednesday, Nov. 22—Med. '28 vs. Dent. '25.

The first round of the schedule was very successful from a standpoint of playing ability of the various teams taking part as well as from the standpoint of interest shown by the various classes around the college. There was only one defaulted game, and it is hoped by the executive that there will be no further need for a team to default because of an insufficient number of players turning out. It is up to the representatives to see that they will have a full turnout of men for the evening game, for two defaults mean that the team must be withdrawn.

There has been some trouble about men playing who have not been medically examined prior to taking part in the games, and some suspensions have resulted on this account. However, now that (Continued on Page Two)

ADMIRAL SIMS TO RECEIVE DEGREE

Convocation to Be Held in R.V.C. on Friday

On Friday, in the Royal Victoria College, a special Convocation will be held, at which Admiral W. S. Sims, G.C.M.G., of the U.S. Navy, will have conferred on him the degree of Doctor of Laws.

The Admiral is on a trip to his home town, Port Hope, Ont., and during his short stay in Montreal will participate in quite an extensive programme that has been arranged for him.

The McGill Students' Council has passed a resolution urging the students to attend the Convocation, and have also arranged a very attractive programme. The Glee Club, as well as the Mandolin Club, will supply the music and lead the various songs.

A large gathering is expected to welcome this eminent visitor, who has done so much to cement the bonds of friendship between the United States and Britain, and McGill men are strongly urged to take advantage of this opportunity to welcome him here.

BASKET MEN AT QUEEN'S OPTIMISTIC

Lost by Small Margin Last Year

VETERANS BACK

Presbyterians Hope to Win Title This Season

The following is an article, which appeared in the Queen's Journal, gives an idea of the spirits of the Queen's basketball team.

The good showing put up by the tri-colour team this year in rugby has indeed instilled new life into the athletic activities at Queen's. Last year McGill won the basketball championship by a small margin. This year, according to the tenor of the following article, Queen's expect to win.

"Queen's Senior Basketball squad this year seems destined to follow in the path of the victorious rugby team, and bring further honors to the University. Not since the Stone Age, about which hazy period we last won the championship, have prospects appeared so bright as they do this year. Last year, the rejuvenated tri-colour squad succeeded in defeating the Varsity quintette here by the decisive score of 36-25, and only lost out to the McGill champions by 36-32, after a game in which the slightest nod of Lady Luck, in our direction, would have meant a three-cornered tie in the series.

"This year finds the good team of last winter all back at Queen's, and already entering into the practices in a business-like way. Indications are that they will have the fight of their lives in keeping their places. A pleasing feature of the practices so far has been the class shown by the "new faces," and it is this healthy competition which promises to bring out the best team seen here in years.

"At centre, Aubrey Jones, last year's captain, and one of the team's best shots, will fight it out with two new-comers, Hunter and Hannon. Both these lads have the experience, size and speed to make good in Senior company, and a beautiful battle seems on the cards before this important pivotal position is won.

"For defence, Lewis and Ellis, last year's sturdy pair, will be re-inforced by the addition of "Bud" Thomas, whose speed and all-round ability should help make the defence a heart-breaker for the opposing teams sharpshooters. On the forward area, Haslam, Thomas, Gibson and Moore, who patrolled these regions so well last winter, are all here again and looking better in practice than ever. They will have to be at their best—with such good men as Henderson, McKinnon, Cross, Ada, Salter, Dunlop, Irwin and numerous others available, there will be a merry old fight for all the positions. Its an open fight—each new-comer will have the same chance to make good as the better-known players.

"Negotiations are now under way for a trip to the States at Christmas, and an effort is being made to secure games with Boston Tech., Harvard, Syracuse, Watertown and other fast teams. Such a trip will do the team a world of good, and put them right on edge for the more important battles to come in the New Year. Altogether, McGill and Varsity appear to be in for a rough time of it, and the Basketball Squad promises to add a few more boulders on the path to the championship of our rivals; along with those strewn by our battling rugby squad.

COMMERCE VISITS PAINT FACTORY

Inspect Plant of Sherwin-Williams Co. of Canada

Yesterday afternoon Commerce seniors had the opportunity of visiting the plant of the Sherwin-Williams Co. of Canada, Ltd., which, with its subsidiaries, forms the largest paint and varnishing manufacturing concern in the British Empire. It will give some idea of the wide range of the company's business to mention that it makes a classification of 55 separate products, which are included under the general heads of paint, varnish and colour making, linseed oil crushing, and white lead corrodng.

The plant on Centre Street, which occupies six and a half acres, is already too small for requirements. It has its own admirably equipped power house, but under present conditions, finds it cheaper to use outside electricity. The total yearly gallonage output of paint, from the Montreal plant is about 720,000 gallons. The total yearly paste output is 4,000,000 pounds. A linseed oil mill forms part of the plant, and turns out 1,000,000 gallons of linseed oil, mill oil, and 6,000 tons of linseed oil mill cake. The total yearly output of varnish is 800,000 gallons.

Starting from the handsome offices of the company, the visitors passed into the paint factory, where the huge mills grind and mix the white lead, the colouring matter and the oil. The mixture then passes by gravitation into immense vats, where it remains for 24 hours before it is strained and put into the different sized tins.

The paint factory is divided into three departments; one occupying itself with quick drying, first quality, pure oil colours, other fine paints and varnish paints; a second department occupying itself with grinding enamels, buggy paints and varnish colours; the third department with house paints, roof and bridge paints, flat wall finishes and all liquid specialties. The students were then conducted to the testing laboratory, where all raw material is tested, and where several tests are made for new products. A varnish was shown which produces a very glossy effect without any rubbing, and which is at present in demand by nearly all the furniture manufacturers in Canada.

Some of the minor departments which were then visited were the stationery department, where advertising and stationery orders are filled; the labelling department, where the tins, barrels, pails etc. are labelled, and the storehouse, where the oxides, colours and tin foil are kept.

Next came the tin can department, where all the tin receptacles used by the company are made. The equipment consists of three can machines; three testing machines; two side-seaming machines (for soldering); five presses for bodies, tops, bottoms and raps; and one lock-seaming press for half-gallon and gallon pails. The annual output is 2,000,000 cans, 2,000,000 pails, and 8,000 press cans.

The printing and advertising department, which was next visited, is one of the most important. Here all the printing of labels, advertising and posters, etc. are printed. Here eight presses and six sampling machines are operated.

SOCIETE FRANCAISE PLAN GOOD PROGRAM

A meeting of the Societe Francaise will be held on Thursday, November 9, at 4 p.m., in the Common Room, R. V. C. The program, which promises to be an entertaining one, is in the hands of the first and second years. This will give them an opportunity of displaying their histrionic as well as their linguistic abilities. A prize will be given to those participating in the entertainment who afford the greatest proof of their talents.

Further progress will be made with the French songs, which were learned at the last meeting, and after tea has been served an opportunity will be given for the members to meet some French guests who are to be present.

In connection with the Societe it has also been announced that a party will be formed to attend the performance at the Theatre des Nouveaux on Armistice Night, Saturday, the 11th. The play, "Coeur de Moineaux," is to be a benefit performance for veterans, and seats at reduced prices will be reserved for McGill students. Those who wish to attend are to sign the lists at either the R.V.C. or the Arts Building.

The attention of R.V.C. students is also called to the splendid gift of the "Revue des Deux Mondes" to the R. V. C. Library. The edition comprises practically every number of the Revue since the inauguration of the paper, and contains much valuable material for students of French or of Comparative Literature.

MENTAL MEDIOCRITY

A university is an institution which exists fundamentally for the advancement of learning and as such it should have no nooks or crannies for dormant mentalities or dead-wood personalities. And rightly so. Students are essentially those who are in search of knowledge and in order to be successful must be in possession of keen, active minds which do not hesitate to tackle the most difficult problems with tenacity and perseverance.

That famous essayist, Michel de Montaigne, described this idea of mental adventure, as only a great genius can, when he wrote: "No generous mind can stop in itself; it ever makes claims and goes beyond its strength; it has sallies beyond its effects; it does not advance and press forward, and retire and drive home, and recoil upon itself and turn about, it is but half alive." In other words, Montaigne realized that there are minds in existence which live from day to day in a comatose state; and that the owners of such minds suffer from mental lethargy, which terminates only when they pass out of this existence into the indefinite eternity.

But there is yet another aspect to this problem of mental adventure. When once we have left the land of peaceful ignorance there is no return. We must either keep striving for further truth and knowledge, trying to overcome the most serious of problems and trying to conquer in every mental struggle, or we must admit defeat—acknowledge ourselves beaten and the captives of our mental foes. As Edward Dowden, in an essay on Montaigne, so aptly says: "We cannot return to the simple state of the peasant; having once eaten of the insane root which ravages the brain with the disease of speculation, we can heal our malady only by pursuing the problems that harass us until we have solved them or ascertained that they are insoluble. A hasty agnosticism is, indeed, treason against the intellect of man."

Thus we see that we are confronted by two alternatives—we must advance further and further into the realms of knowledge or we must stand still in our tracks, the owners of semi-developed mentalities, the half-completed products of partial education.

The latter alternative is bound to be ill-fated and men who have chosen to do this have caused disaster to fall upon themselves and upon their fellow-men. The reason is simple. They are like ships that are only half constructed and when storms arise they do not survive. They are men living half in the light and half in the dark, possessing partly formed ideas, coming to illogical conclusions and formulating unsound judgments. And this is all the result of stopping off at the convenient intermediate station between sound understanding, at which few of us arrive, and blissful ignorance, from where we all start.

We, as students, are still in the middle region and the heights of attainable knowledge are far distant. We must remember, however, not to choose the unfortunate alternative. We can never attain mental perfection but the extent of our development depends entirely upon ourselves. Let us take care that we do not stay in the middle region of mediocrity.

THE PLAYERS' CLUB

This afternoon the Players' Club will meet for the annual election of officers and for the transaction of other important business. This Club is one of the most important organizations in the University but unfortunately, for varied reasons, a great many difficulties have been met with during the past few years and the members of the Club have been working under severe handicaps.

It is hoped, however, that a new spirit of enthusiasm will be noticed at this afternoon's meeting and that success will be assured for the coming season. The Players' Club is certainly worthy of the general support of the undergraduate body and it is urged that all who are actively interested in theatrical presentations should make a special effort to be present at this important gathering.

The action taken by the Students' Council in condemning the misconduct of two Medical students in one of the hospitals in Montreal, is worthy of the highest commendation, both as serving to check such unseemly behaviour and as marking a function of the Council which those about college may be prone to forget. The Council exists not only to administer but to regulate; and the assurance given by yesterday's decision that its members will take steps to prevent students from over-stepping the bounds of decency and propriety should be a matter of congratulation to the undergraduate body as a whole, as also to those with whom these latter are in constant and direct contact.

NEW YORK UNIVERSITY.

Are there too many students going to college? The president of Dartmouth started something when he put this question. Discussion has been raging since. New York University's registration figures, just compiled, give a good idea of the situation in the metropolitan district.

The total enrollment of the university to date is 12,333 students, of which 2,278 are women. Compared to this N.Y.U. had a total of 11,022 students in 1921. There are now exactly 1,304 more enrollment seekers here than in 1921. Of New York University's component college the School of Commerce, Accounts, and Finance once more leads in the number of students enrolled, having 5,070 this year. Last October this school had 4,855 students. Next in numbers is the Summer School with 1986 enrolled to 2,096 the previous year.

The College of Engineering, the Medical College, the Graduate School, and the Summer School show a decrease in enrollment this year. The remaining eight schools of the university all show a substantial increase over 1921. The Veterinary College, whose enrollment was never very high, has been dropped. The School of Education is the only one in the university having more women than men, the numbers being 235 to 167.

cided on the stiff penalty for the offence.

The President of the Council, in giving the decision to the two offenders, reminded them that their actions when attending college reflected not only on themselves, but on their year and the college as a whole. He deeply regretted that the affair had occurred, and expressed the hope, on behalf of the Council and the students as a whole, that there should be no recurrence of such actions.

A letter expressing the regret of the Students' Council will be sent to the hospital in question, with an assurance on the part of the undergraduates that such actions are deeply deplored by all of them, and that they will guard against any future happenings of a similar nature.

CORRESPONDENCE

The Daily is not responsible for the sentiments of letters published in the correspondence columns. Signed communications from graduates, undergraduates and members of the faculties will be placed in print if they are not of too great length.

Correspondents are requested to observe the unwritten law of the newspaper office—that they write upon ONE SIDE OF THE PAPER ONLY.

The Editor, McGill Daily.

Macdonald College,
Ste Anne de Bellevue,
Nov. 4th, 1922.

The Editor,
McGill Daily:

Sir,—The report of the rugby game between Macdonald and McGill, appearing in your issue of Nov. 2, has caused extensive enquiries to be made here regarding the state of mind of the reporters responsible for the account. We do not believe it could have been written by one who saw the game, or, if so, by one who can interpret rugby and tell the truth.

The breaks were entirely with the McGill team. Most of McGill's points were made on fumbles by the Green and Gold, and the statement that "about 90 per cent of McGill's plays were end runs," can bear looking into. Also, if the McGill team, as reported, went through Mac's line "like water through a sieve," why did it elect to kick rather than attempt a try, when but two yards from Mac's goal line, in the second quarter? And again, McKibbin and Lanthier did not get hurt trying to force their way through the McGill line, but were injured when the McGill man whom they tackled from each side, dodged, and they came together.

Reporters should aim to give an unbiased account of events, and not write for rhetorical effect. A college paper, above all, should never run the risk of being accused of partiality.

Lastly, we would like to know, if the game in question can be termed a "white-washing" of the losing team, what is the corresponding term to describe the Varsity-McGill affair at the Stadium two Saturdays ago?

Sincerely yours,

(Signed)
C. R. MITCHELL,
J. A. MCGARIGLE.

the first round of the league has been finished, it is believed that there will be no further trouble in this connection.

As is stated elsewhere in this issue, the practices in Molson Hall have been cancelled until further notice, due to the starting of the class basketball series. This will last only for a matter of a couple of weeks, however. Men of the freshman and sophomore years who have been getting gym attendance through these practices are advised to attend the regular gym classes in order to fill out the required two hours per week.

If any men who are thoroughly conversant with the rules of indoor baseball wish to help out in the matter of umpiring, their help will be most welcome. Names should be handed in to any member of the executive. To date the only nights which have been taken are Monday nights, which will be looked after by Reg. Henry, and Tuesday nights, which will be in charge of Earl Wight. Additional names are asked for as soon as possible.

The schedule for the third round will be published in the "Daily" on the completion of the above schedule. Class representatives are asked to keep this list, but it might be said in this connection that the above schedule is subject to change. The games, however, will be published in the Daily each day, and any change can be easily noted.

THE DILLETTANTE

BOOKS ONE READS

TWO MODERN REALISTS

1.—MORTAL COILS

By Aldous Huxley

It is a relief sometimes to turn from the beaten track of popular fiction with its sociological preachments and machine-made English into some of the more secluded by-paths, where flourish more recondite but more studied literary productions. "Mortal Coils" is a collection of five ingenious little sketches that one may read entirely for their own sake.

Mr. Huxley is fortunate in possessing two generations of literary distinction at his back, and I think he has caught up not a little of the preciseness of phrase and sweet clarity of diction of his forbear, the great essayist. There is another endearing factor about Aldous Huxley's work, and that is his altogether charming cynicism; not the rather tedious misanthropy of Swift, but a quiet all-pervading amusement with a skillfully planted Voltairean knife-thrust here and there. Somehow I can't help imagining Aldous Huxley as shutting himself up in a high glass tower for a few hours every day, there to chuckle softly to himself and write a few carefully turned paragraphs. "Crome Yellow" was the sort of book that must have been produced that way. I can imagine Mr. Average Man writhing rather painfully in the reading of it, and feeling pretty helpless withal.

"Mortal Coils" introduces in addition to all this the element of the unexpected. None of the sketches are the sort of thing one could encounter anywhere else, and even when Mr. Huxley makes use of a very conventional back-bone he will give the tale a queer twist at the end that makes one sit up and take notice.

The last story of all deserves special mention. It is called "Nuns at Luncheon." It hasn't anything to do with a lot of veiled figures grouped about the tables of a refractory, of course;—most of Huxley's titles are just part of the joke. It tells of a grisly sort of woman journalist with ear-rings like "corpses hanging in chains; and an agreeable literary smile." This delightful lady tells a rather grimly realistic anecdote to a friend of hers in a Berlin restaurant. But it is not the story itself that fascinates one, but it is the diabolical artistry with which we are again and again dragged back to the callous figure of the narrator as she orders a small Guinness and then a cheroot, or whatever the "wretch" drinks and smokes, while she continues with her tale. Always the sinister figure of the woman, who finally seems to weave herself into the tale itself.

Aldous Huxley errs in company with most modern realists in one way. It is possible surely to be a devoted disciple of Freud without scattering broadcast the terminology of psychoanalysis. It comes just a little close to didacticism at times. But when all is said and done Mr. Huxley must be classed very highly indeed. He is an artist and as an author whose work deserves to live I'd back him up any day against ten thousand A. S. M. Hutchinsons. One hasn't got the feeling that there is the grim spectre of some publisher at his shoulder reminding him his next "book" must be ready for the Christmas sale.

2.—THE MOTHER OF ALL LIVING

By Robert Keable

"Robert Keable is a clergyman." One would do well in reading "The Mother of All Living" to pin a notice to this effect over one's desk so that the conscience may be eased by glancing at it following the perusal of not a few chapters of this novel; concluding, of course, that whatever a clergyman writes must have a moral behind it, however immoral it may appear on the surface. In an earlier book by the same author, "Simon Called Peter", the morality preached or practised was ever-present, and what were to many, and to myself, the "interesting" chapters were separated by pages and pages of religious philosophy, which proved the only interruptions to what would have otherwise been a continuous bluish, mantling the fair cheeks of the reader.

In "The Mother of All Living" Keable still attempts to make his book appeal to the class of people whose tastes are usually catered to by a legion of magazines, with titles ranging from "Smart Set" to "Live Wire." He has, however, no doubt suddenly recollecting his calling, made an effort to cover this up, and he substitutes for the previously used religious whitewash, which was at its best dull as death, the less convincing but more modern coating of psychology.

But Keable above all is interesting. At times he is almost magnificent. In this, his latest book, though failing to reach the heights, he is never dull, and his story, though lacking finish, is well told.

It concerns in the main Miss Cecil Eldred, who steps from an English boarding-school, and its secluded, prosaic life into stark, primitive South Africa. The change that takes place in Cecil forms the pith of the first part. We bow to Mr. Keable's knowledge of English life, but we feel that Cecil's ignorant innocence, or innocent ignorance, was not acquired because of the boarding-school, but in the face of it. Cecil concludes from a survey of affairs, and from lengthy but interesting conversations with a handful of characters that her previous unsophisticated outlook on life is ill-adapted to South Africa, and at the end of the first part she is left looking about for one more suitable to the climate.

The rest of the book is concerned chiefly with a post-marital entanglement with Christopher Ashurst. Enter Pamela, a refreshingly free thinking woman, who undertakes for Cecil's sake to alienate Christopher's affections. Chris disappoints the majority of the readers and remains true to Cecil, only to discover that she has decided to stay with her husband and child. In disgust he steps so far out of his character as to propose marriage; this time to Pamela, who has loved him for ages and pages. He is accepted, and I am sure they lived hilariously ever after. Cecil and her husband and family—there must be by now—are no doubt subscribers to the London Times. Hugh, the husband, should be interested in the chess-problems.

Among the subordinate characters, Gwen, Cecil's sister, plays the leading part. She receives outrageous treatment from the author. After having been used for every purpose from passion to pathos ever conceived by an ingenious novelist, she is left in mid-air where she will most likely remain, saying to the last things little girls shouldn't think of. "Mother of All Living" should if possible be read after "Simon Called Peter." There should be no children's matinees for this book, but it is well worth reading, and even if one's friends don't admit that they possess a copy, borrow one somehow. —AGAG.

THE REVOLT AGAINST CIVILIZATION

By Lathrop Stoddard

Before dealing with this, Mr. Stoddard's latest work, it might be as well to say something about the author and his other books. Mr. Stoddard achieved world-wide prominence in a very short space of time by means of his two first publications, "The New World of Islam" and "The Rising Tide of Colour," the latter having reached its eleventh edition. He is well known as a writer on the extremely controversial topic of the fusion of different races, and as the result of the stand taken by him in advocating exclusiveness on the part of the white races has attained the distinction of having a great many critics, than which there is scarcely any better criterion of genuine fame. Many regard him simply as a writer with a "bug", a hot-headed apostle of doctrines which he has not fully digested. Others again look on him as one of the prophets of the age. We do not pretend to decide the matter fully yet we are more sympathetically inclined towards the latter view.

When Mr. Stoddard published his "Rising Tide of Colour" he startled the thinking world by his clear-cut presentation of the facts concerning the challenge to the world-supremacy of the white man. In his latest work, "The Revolt Against Civilization," he has performed an even greater task. For he has explained clearly the causes of decay in civilization and portrayed vividly the existence of these causes today. He has demonstrated the terrific menace to society lurking in the horde of mental inferiors and incapables, envious and hateful, longing to destroy civilization in an effort to get back to a primitive, more congenial social order.

The facts of the books are based on the biological revelations of the last decade which have shown conclusively that abilities and capacities are in-born as opposed to the old environmental theories and the pathetic cry of the rabid Socialist, declaiming from the exalted height of his proverbial soap-box that "all men are equal." "Nature," says Stoddard, "knows no equality." And the facts being largely scientific are not open to challenge by the ordinary reader. But reference to leading works on the subject show them to be correct and his assertions are so convincingly made that one is impressed with the idea that truth is there.

Perhaps the author practically starts off with a conclusion. But how many are guiltless here? Maybe he does over-exaggerate somewhat along one or two lines. But that is not sufficient to condemn him utterly. For he brings forcibly to public attention the problems we are face to face with today and suggests solutions that make great appeal to the practical man. In fact it is quite certain that when remedial legislation is put through it will be on the basis outlined by Mr. Stoddard.

As a first class piece of literature "it isn't." But then that is not the purpose of the book. And moreover it is written with a vigour and a style of quality sufficient to hold any person's interest, very concise and vivid, requiring no forced effort on the part of the reader. Altogether it is a production which everyone interested in the progress of the world should read whether or not one agrees with the author's views.

MUSIC

THE BOSTON SYMPHONY ORCHESTRA

Montreal's much bewailed lack of a symphony orchestra has one serious disadvantage in that the programmes of the infrequent concerts performed by visiting orchestras are selected mainly with an eye to the money-bags. While this can not be said of the Thanksgiving concert at the St. Denis Theatre—Mr. Montoux and the Boston Symphony Orchestra have a reputation to keep—one is nevertheless left with a feeling that the programme might have contained a more effective foil to the Brahms' Symphony than Berlioz' clever piece of "programme music"—and a more interesting finish than the slightly tarnished Tannhauser Overture.

The Brahms' Symphony (No. 1, in C Minor)—"Beethoven's 10th", as someone has called it—amply atoned for any shortcomings in the rest of the programme. The orchestra played under an inspired baton. From the Berserker opening leading to the fierce Allegro, down to the triumphant finale, the whole piece breathes the Beethoven tradition. Who of the moderns, other than Brahms, could take two themes, already developed by Beethoven in his greatest moments, and work them out successfully—and who, one is tempted to add, of the conductors who have appeared in Montreal during the last few years, could interpret in more masterly fashion the result?

It is interesting to contrast the personalities of the two conductors—Montoux of the Boston, and Damrosch of the New York Symphony Orchestra, as shown by their musicians. The latter has produced a Prussian-like precision, with more than a touch of its attendant woodenness; his bows rise and fall as if attached to a frame; the very stands seem to align themselves according to the principles so admirably enunciated (however unadvisedly) by the late Mr. Euclid;—one almost hears the clockwork. Mr. Damrosch has succeeded so well that one imagines his orchestra would do just as well without him. It is different with the Boston orchestra, the members of which are musicians first and a regiment, if need be, afterwards. The violins, judged by the alignment of their bows, are a very ragged group of geniuses; the entire personnel prattles about in decidedly unmilitary manner so soon as a number is completed; and the flautist apparently selects by preference the middle of a cadenza passage to crack a joke with his partner. Notwithstanding which, the Boston Symphony Orchestra is an orchestra—and the Gotham "aggregation" does the goose-step.

The Boston orchestra possesses perhaps the finest brass in North America and this was well brought out by the trio for trombones in the fourth movement of the Symphony, and in the Tannhauser Overture. The blending of the woodwind and brass was marvellous and, for one at least in the audience, it was worth while wrestling in spirit with the "après-midi d'un Faune" of Debussy (who, notwithstanding the wisecracks, is still caviare to the general) to hear the blending and emerging of the oboe and clarinet. Madame Frieda Hempel was the soloist and gave two songs. Her voice is delightfully handled and is amazingly pure, true and powerful, but belongs less to the true soprano than to the mezzo-soprano class. For this reason she would possibly have been better advised to choose some other contrast to the conventionally beautiful air and recitative from "Figaro" than Thomas' notorious coloratura aria from "Mignon," the last high note of which was almost out of her reach.

PLAYS & THE LIKE

HIS MAJESTY'S

The "Dumbbells" are being received by crowded and enthusiastic audiences, and it is not to be wondered at, since they long since ceased to be a mere theatrical company. To most people they are now an institution.

There is something very refreshing in the far-away tang of war-time humour, even if it is a little frayed at the edges, so to speak. People have ceased to demand something new from the "Dumbbells" as long as they can have the same old songs and the same old jokes—vintage 1916—put over the foot-lights by "Marjorie" Hamilton, Al. Plunkett, and the rest of the inimitable company.

It is remarkable how some of the old songs do stand the test of time, provided of course that they are sung with a capacity and an understanding that is distinctly above the average. Ancient things like "The Road to Mandalay" and "My Old Dutch" simply brought down the house.

Some of the stage-settings are very attractive, notably in the Oriental scene and in Holland Days. Need one say anything about the "girls"? After "Marjorie" Hamilton had sung "Widows are Wonderful" in her beautiful "contralto" voice I felt quite sad to think that I would see her wave her blonde wig about later on. Widows would indeed be wonderful if they were all like Mr. Hamilton.

It is hard to give a general impression of the performance, because it is just plain "show" of the pot-pourri variety. It is naturally very uneven and one tumbles all the way down from the heights of Captain Plunkett's singing to the rather unimpressive low comedy of the finale or of "The Family Battalion." Still it's the "Dumbbells" and what can one do about it.

THEATRE PARISIEN

"La Dame de Chez Maxim," playing at the Parisien all this week, is a boisterous farce, occupying, on the French stage, a position somewhat analogous to that of "Charley's Aunt" on the American. Like "Charley's Aunt," it is crowded with ridiculous situations, and abounds with catch-phrases which become more and more funny through repetition. It has been in use in France for many years, but never seems to grow old.

As "La Mome Crevette," who is responsible for all the trouble in the play, Mlle. Dartois is delightful. It would not be fair to say she is not vulgar; she is supposed to be, and she very emphatically is. But she carries off her vulgarity with such swing and dash, with such evident whole-heartedness and pleasure, that it is not in the least offensive. Mr. Montell, the leading man, is very good in a somewhat less exacting role. Simonne Riviere puts a lot into the part of a superstitious old woman. Mr. Roux, in Emile, carries a difficult part with success, and Guy Dervey, as usual, does much convincing work with his hands and eyes.

Georges Feydeau, the author, has crowded a tremendous amount of rich, if sometimes a little spicy, humour into his lines, to such an extent that even the improbabilities of the piece are not noticeable. "La Dame de Chez Maxim" takes three hours to perform, but no audience would have it shortened by an instant.

The Parisien company is putting on another comedy next week, "Chateau Historique," by Alexandre Bisson. These players have so far confined themselves to charmingly ridiculous plays; we should like to see them try tragedy, as several of the principals undoubtedly have it in them to handle heavy roles with ability.

STUDENT VERSE

FRAGMENT TO A LADY'S EYES

The sea of Life is fraught with dangers stern
To ships that hold their courses through each storm,
And so the boldest seamen oftimes yearn
The tranquil waters, which their legends form,
A landlocked harbour, broad, with room to ride
At anchor, or to swell the sails
With gentle breezes, skirting shores inside
So beautiful, as run these seamen's tales,
That raptured souls forget their former fear.
The entrance to this place is guarded well
By two bright beacon fires, but very near
Two others, boding shipwreck, None can tell
Between. So none except who Fate defies
Should risk the passage of a woman's eyes.

TO A SEA-GULL

Dip and glide, dip and glide;
Soar and wheel and float;
Skim along the racing tide,
Like a silver boat,
Till thy form is lost to sight.
So the whole world over
Sea-ward still thou take'st thy flight.
Ne'er was such a rover!

—DIANTHOS.

NOTES BY THE WAY

How do the little Puritan
Make Literature a joke
By popping up whenever he can
To give good books a poke.

In an address delivered before a local business men's club the other day the president of the local branch of the Canadian Authors' Association made an oracular pronouncement on the true basis of the novel perfect. The three essentials of a good novel, it appears, are sincerity, simplicity and charity. We would not insinuate that the statement was made without due sincerity and charity, but as for the simplicity it just shrieks at one.

HARD HITTING WAS FEATURE OF GAME

Arts '24 Won from Dents '25 After Close Struggle

In a hard hitting, much disputed game, Arts '24 won from Dents '25 in an indoor baseball game, by the score of 15 to 8, at the High School gym last night. Arts took the floor quite confident of a win, as only seven of the Dental baseball enthusiasts showed enough interest to come out to the game. However, in the first inning, Arts received a surprise, when the Dent run getters succeeded in putting them one up on the crestfallen Arts aggregation. In spite of desperate efforts on the part of their opponents, Dents, held their lead, and it was not until the beginning of the fourth inning that Arts' batters began hitting with any degree of accuracy. In this inning the game was decided, Arts bringing in nine runs and banking their opponents. No runs were scored after this.

Some of the players were not too familiar with the rules, and were sent back to their bases several times.

The batteries of both teams were weak, in the case of Arts, owing to the absence of their regular catcher, and in Dents, to lack of practice. If the Dents can put a full team on the floor, they will undoubtedly make a much better showing in future. Wright handled the game.

The line-ups were as follows:
Arts '24 Dents '25
Blumenstein Gornitsky
Webster Shoke
Bethel Klein
Sessirwein Muhlstock
Brownstein Goldberg
Fotos Bernstein
Wilson Pollock
Cohen Stone.

PLAYERS' CLUB TO MEET ONCE AGAIN

Department: its purpose being not only the production of drama, but the discussion and study of its many aspects. It was primarily organized with a view to serious work along these lines, and if circumstances have since forced it into less important channels, it is to be regretted.

There is room, much room, for the development of the drama in Canada. Little Theatres all over the country are doing their best to foster such development, but they do not seem to be accomplishing very much, as yet, in bringing up the standards either of taste or of talent in our people. They cannot afford the thorough and technical elementary training necessary to college men who are seriously interested in the stage. Our college organization must do this, and if it is to be successful it must have the hearty support of the undergraduates and their friends.

Still it must be just a "leefle" hard to talk intelligently about "Babbitt" to the Kiwanis Club,

The gentleman with the blackened face in the "Dumbbells" delivered himself of three jokes in succession the other night, which we remember to have seen used on several occasions for the "Daily." This is surely a record for the comedy stage.

BASEBALL BITS

A few of the most important rules and a little of the dope that all indoor baseball players should know.

The pitcher is allowed to take only one step in the box before the ball is delivered. He must stand with his heels on the back line of the box when in the pitching position.

The batter must be in his box while batting. If he has one foot out of the box at the time he takes a wham at the ball he can be called out.

A foul which rises above the batter's head and which is caught retires the batter, only when there are two strikes on him.

A ball caught off the wall is not out, but a ball which strikes the ceiling or any of the pipes or steel work, and is caught counts an out. A foul ball which strikes the gallery and is caught does not count as an out.

If the ball goes under the mats or apparatus at the far end of the gym on a hit, the runner is only entitled to two bases.

A runner may not leave his base until the ball has passed the ceiling or has been struck by the batter. A runner struck by a batted ball is out.

A batter who is struck by the rebound of a batted ball which lights fair is out. He is not out if the ball lights foul and strikes him or if it hits him before landing on the ground.

A foul bunt on the third strike retires the batter.

The third strike must be caught in order to retire the batter, or failing this he must be played upon at first in the usual manner.

ALLIANCE FRANCAISE WILL MEET TONIGHT

McGill students of French are especially invited to the second meeting of the Alliance Francaise at 8.15 to-night, in the Ritz Carlton Hotel.

Madame Jehanne d'Orliac, well known in French letters, will discuss the character "Celimene" in Moliere's "Le Misanthrope"; and will then read and explain some of the fables she has herself written and published.

As a rule, admittance is open only to members, a privilege jealously guarded; but Dr. Villard, secretary of the organization, has used his influence for an exception in the case of McGill students. They have only to inform the porter that they are from McGill to be admitted.

An enjoyable evening is assured, as the Alliance always prepares an excellent program, and this occasion will not prove any exception. Apart from the literary point of view, an opportunity will be furnished to hear the best French spoken, and as many students as possible should take advantage of this exceptional opportunity.

A team defaulting more than one game will lose all league standing.

A ball striking the ceiling fair and landing foul on the floor will be called a fair ball.

And for the love of Pete, don't crawl at the umpire; he isn't there because he likes to be an umpire, but to help run things properly. If you have a grudge against him, wait for him outside, but don't delay the game by trying to beat him up on the gym floor!

PROGRESSIVES

The policy of the Progressive Government is as follows:—

- 1.—The abolition of hanging as the form of capital punishment.
- 2.—The increase of the standing army.
- 3.—The continuation of the present system of government ownership of railways, affording the new general manager, Sir Henry Thornton, an opportunity to improve the administration thereof.
- 4.—The construction of a permanent transcontinental highway and kindred activities.
- 5.—The institution of intelligence tests for all university professors. Provision for their exchange to remote countries.
- 6.—The original status for the R. N. W. M. Police.
- 7.—The organization of the co-eds into an efficient bodyguard to be placed at the disposal of the Minister of Militia.
- 8.—Indefinite postponement of the scrapping of the Canadian Navy.
- 9.—Amendment to the Marriage Act to allow the captain of the Navy to marry, since the Navy needs a cook. Increase of the Navy personnel from 30 to 5.
- 10.—Protection for essential industries. Raw materials duty free. Increase of taxes on luxuries and articles bought exclusively by the rich.
- 11.—Removal of taxes on cigarettes and tobacco and co-operation in diminishing excises on beverages and liquors.
- 12.—A selective immigration, admitting the desiderables of British white and Nordic races.
- 13.—Dominion aids to University students by way of subsidies and scholarships.
- 14.—The recognition of the Canadian's absolute freedom of right to justice, consistent with law, order and progressive government.

Their Manifesto

Parliament will be opened Thursday evening at 8.15 o'clock, by the Governor-General, Sir Arthur Currie, who will read the Speech from the Throne. The address in reply will be moved by Hon. Henri Cousens, seconded by Hon. R. V. Fortune. The debate on the Speech from the Throne will then take place. Following this, time permitting, the government will introduce a bill to abolish hanging; and time still permitting, a bill to increase the Canadian standing army will be brought forward. This legislation proposes to increase proportionally in all arms the army from its present strength of approximately 2,500 to 10,000. This is necessary and highly advisable in order to permit the training of a larger and more efficient militia. The attitude, it is urged, adopted here is not one of militarism, but merely a judicious propagation of physical well-being to the manhood of Canada. There is no more highly desirable manner in which a young man can spend two weeks in the summer than in the military camps—for the instillation not of militarism, but of physical and mental vigor. It is a recognized fact that the standing army is too small at the present time to handle as many men and boys as wish to go with the militia. And, again, Canada cannot afford to bank upon continued peace. World events indicate quite the contrary. A judicious preparedness may prove the means of preserving our homes and our loved ones. There is no country in the world to-day, it is said, with an army proportionally so small as the Canadian. This state implies a degree of trust on our part

CONSTITUTIONALISTS

The Policy of the Constitutional Party is:—

- 1.—Sweeping reforms in the Department of Student Welfare as follows:—
 - a.—Abolition of examinations.
 - b.—Erection of students' dormitories.
 - c.—Police protection for men students at the corner of Sherbrooke and University streets.
 - d.—Institution of the degree of B.U.M., to be conferred only in very special cases.
 - e.—Erection of the gymnasium in the Stadium.
- 2.—Decrease of the public debt by means of a strong protective tariff, the strictest economy in all departments of the Government, and the return of the National Railways to private ownership and control.
- 3.—Careful supervision of immigration. Every effort to be made to secure only the best class of immigrants from British countries and friendly countries. Stringent regulations as to health, educational and financial qualifications. Government aid to new settlers to prevent them from joining the ranks of the unemployed.
- 4.—Stimulation of trade within the Empire by means of an Imperial Economic Conference, and a preferential tariff.

Manifesto of the Party

The policy of the Constitutional party is one designed to cope in a sane, orderly way with the big issues confronting the country today, the most important of which are the reduction of the public debt, the railway problem, immigration, agricultural development, and bringing about the closest co-operation between the Dominion and the Imperial Government in all matters of common concern.

In its effort to solve these questions, the Constitutional Party when returned to power, will put into effect the principle that private initiative must be encouraged by every possible means and it will at once lighten the burden of taxation which has been pressing so heavily upon legitimate business enterprise. Believing that interference by the State with trade should be reduced to a minimum, all regulations tending to hinder business will be abolished, preserving only such as are necessary to protect Labor from exploitation. Every effort will be made to encourage British capital to develop the natural resources of the Dominion. In order to stimulate trade with the Empire, the Constitutional Party advocates that the Dominion co-operate with the British Government in calling an Imperial Economic Conference. Industrial expansion will receive the most careful consideration, and private enterprise will be encouraged in every possible way. The Party will therefore combat energetically every attempt to put into force the theories of State Socialism, Syndicalism, Bolshevism or any other "ism" which will injure the orderly developments of the country. For this reason the Party is strongly opposed to the continued operation of the railways by the Government and will seek to return them to private ownership and control.

teams have been travelling fast, and when they hook up to-night they should afford plenty of excitement. All McGill supporters are urged to be on hand, as the Red and White are out to win.

The following is the McGill line-up for to-night's game:—

Goal—Jardine.
Defence—Forsyth and Bethel.
Forwards—Vickerson, Moore and Kyle.

FISTS, FALLS & FOILS

Another record breaking work-out of the Boxing Club took place yesterday afternoon at Molson's Hall.

There were about fifteen new aspirants to the manly art at the practice, in addition to the usual crowd of fans.

Among the new comers to the battlers' ranks is Adams, a freshman in Arts-Theology. Adams tips the scales at 125 pounds.

This battler has had considerable boxing experience in the army. He is very clever and fast.

Sullivan, last year's collegiate champion in the 125 class, is in training again. He seems to be in tip-top shape, and packs a wicked wallop.

O'Brien is both a wrestler and a boxer. He claims that one branch improves the other. He is a husky, and weighs 145 pounds.

There will be three rounds of mill-the principals in these bouts are in fine ing to-night at a smoker at St. Anne's. shape, and should put up an interesting exhibition.

In the 135 pound class, Merritt meets Woolsey, and in the 110 pounders Wilson meets Sharpe. The other two scrappers will be announced this afternoon.

It is claimed that many of the boxers at the work-outs take medicine. Most of them need it—after putting on the mitts for a while.

'Ernie' Freedman, who figured prominently in last year's wrestling, will be out again with the grapplers this season.

The ten-round bout scheduled for to-night at the Arena between Moe Herscovitch, local welter, and Art Prudhomme, of Ottawa, is attracting considerable interest in local boxing circles.

A special boxing class will be held at Molson's Hall this afternoon. Attendance by invitation only.

Wrestling in the Union at 5.15 p.m.

CHESS CLUB ELECTED OFFICERS FOR YEAR

At a meeting held in the Union last night, the McGill Chess Club elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, Gaudette; Vice-President, Winter; Sec.-Treasurer, Lyons; Councilors, Garelick and Kirsner.

In addition to the elections, arrangements were made to have the Professors' Chess matches held early next week.

COMMERCE VISITS

PAINT FACTORY

Next came the painting department, where an air-brush painting machine, operated by one girl, turns out 700 painted sheets and 15,000 painted slats a day.

The output of the linseed oil mill has already been stated. In this mill are operated four expellers by screw process day and night, and the other equipment comprises two of the most modern oil presses, one centrifugal machine, and one seed cleaner. The oil thus obtained has to be stored for about one year before it can be used in the manufacture of the paint and varnish.

Near at hand is the cooper shop. Some new barrels are coopered, and old ones reclaimed; and the box department, where each employee turns out about 200 boxes per day. All the cases used by the Company in its shipments are made in this department.

From here the visitors were conducted to the varnish department, which is, of course, one of the greatest importance. There are eight varnish fires, and perfectly controlled, up-to-date drafts. The equipment includes twenty standard copper kettles, ten standard steel pots for high-grade Japan making, six underground tanks for thinners, and an air pressure pumping system, eliminating the handling of barrels. There is a well ventilated melting room, where the varnish temperature is always maintained to the regular standard, and there is an up-to-date water trough for the rapid cooling of all China Wood Oil compositions.

Besides all these facilities, there are excellent storage rooms, filtering rooms and presses, seed tanks, oil tanks, and a turpentine tank. There are huge stocks of gums of all descriptions, such as Kauri from New Zealand, Congo gum, Zanzibar gum, and other hard varnish gums. The unsurpassed tankage equipment of the company is of inestimable value, as ensuring proper ageing, as it is this factor which goes far to differentiate supremely good from mediocre or inferior varnish.

The conclusion one forms after going through the plant is that it is not merely supremely equipped, but supremely well organized and well run in every way.

Intermediates Clash With M.A.A.A. To-night

Last night, at the Y.M.C.A. tank, Coach Vernot put the McGill Water Polo teams through a stiff practice in preparation for their forthcoming games. The Intermediates stacked up against the Seniors, and considerable energy was expended during the course of the game.

Both teams have developed into very fast and snappy aggregations, and should figure strongly for the championship. The Senior team takes on the strong M. S. C. outfit on the 14th, and should be able to turn in a win. To-night, at the M. A. A. A. tank, the Intermediates will take on the M. A. A. A. Reds in what promises to be one of the best games of the season. Both
